Conference Brief:

The conference intends to (re)-visit how we, humans have evolved, what we are doing and where we would be in the future from an anthropological perspective, a curiosity that initiated the beginning of anthropological pursuits, studying the 'other' and the 'self' to build a better future. Anthropology, characterised by its holistic ideal concerns human beings all around the world and through time, examining the present geographical, cultural and psychological distribution, with a belief that an understanding of human nature requires drawing together and relating information from all aspects of the human condition. It explores both the origin and changes in human biology and human society. The Faculty of Anthropology in IGNOU endeavours to carve out a unique position through this Two Day International Conference to understand and deliberate, how anthropological studies and interventions would show the way forward and manifest itself in the future.
