3.0: Methodology

The subject expert’s feedback survey was carried out on the basis of primary data. The data was collected from the participant subject experts belonging to foreign languages/ disciplines (Arabic, French, German, Japanese, Korean, Persian, Russian and Spanish) housed at SOFL. The sample size varies from 7 to 1 for different languages/disciplines. The data was collected through a standard questionnaire provided by the CIQA. The structured questionnaire was sent to several experts through email. The questionnaire had questions related to the design, development and the delivery of the programmes in the Open and Distance learning system. For the purpose of analysis, descriptive statistics has been used. Since the response sample is small, qualitative analysis is used to interpret the statements.

5.0: Analysis of the Feedback received:

Subject experts gave their opinions on a broad range of topics related to pedagogy. Main points in a nutshell are as follows:

- All academic programmes offered by SOFL are designed and developed as per the need of the learners.
- Subject Experts were part of the design and development process.
- Syllabus/Curriculum of other universities was discussed.
- Nuances of ODL were discussed properly with the Subject Experts.
- Skill enhancement & employability were kept in mind while designing the curriculum focused on learner centric approach.

6.0: Conclusion and recommendations

Though the data sample is small, the responses received from the subject experts on indicators of programme design and development in Open University system provide an important insight for the future revision of the curriculum and the study materials for the various foreign language programmes.

Majority of the subject experts elicit a positive response on the indicators of programme design and development like the importance of need assessment before finalizing the curriculum, the updated curriculum of the subject designed looking at the needs of the students, looking at the flexibility of the open and distance learning system or the need to have a learner-centric approach in the development of the study materials. The subject experts further view that there is a need to develop a mechanism to ensure the receipt of students' feedback immediately at the end of the course and also the feedback from the industry may be drawn more frequently to assess whether the curriculum content matches the needs of the job market, thereby enhancing student's capacity to make himself/herself employable.

The subject experts make the following recommendations:

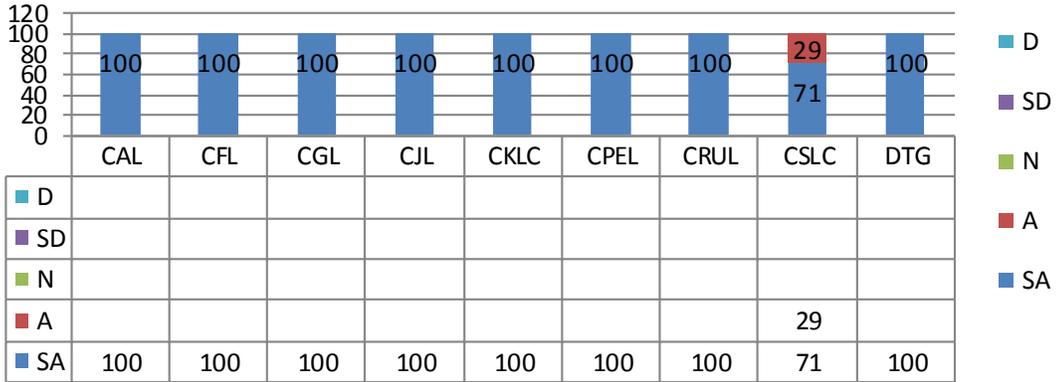

- Immediate need to raise the faculty strength to a critical minimum level considering the number of programmes/courses on offer and other programmes/courses under development at SOFL.
- Courses are as per the latest needs of learners and in future more ways to enhance development of oral communicative competence may need to be updated.
- More dialogues using the words, learnt in the modules would be useful as learning the meaning of a word is not enough if a learner does not know where and how the word is to be used. Adding more animation in the modules would make the program more interesting.
